

Microrite, Inc. brings you this unique learning experience in Why Disinfectant Qualification Studies Fail; Part of Microrite's step-by-step webinar series.

Why Disinfectant Qualification Studies Fail

Disinfectant qualification studies are subjective; there are varieties of errors which can occur in the planning and execution stages. Additionally, lack of understanding of the chemical efficacy and material compatibility can add roadblocks to the study. Recovery and method validation is critical to a successful disinfectant qualification study, if these fail, the study is bound to fail. Most of the errors occur during recovery as hard surfaces pose a problem during this phase, leading to variability. Learn from case studies related numerous failed studies, and learn how to develop and execute a successful disinfectant qualification.
